

BUDGET BRIEFING: District-by-District Funding Impacts of Ohio Charter Schools

The Basics

Gov. John Kasich's proposed two-year, $72 billion state budget provides only a modest overall net increase in education funding of \$464 million, with fewer than half of Ohio school districts (301 of 609) seeing increased funding in 2017.

However, when funding to charter schools is factored in, one in three of those districts will see their increases erased. After charter school deductions, just 200 out of 609 Ohio public school districts see actual funding increases in year two of the proposed budget.

In the last year for which data is available, $380 million in state funding was redirected from higher-performing traditional public school districts to charter schools with poorer performance grades on the state report card. Over a biennium, that's $760 million going to worse options for kids, or two-thirds more than the Governor's proposed $464 million increase in K12 education funding.

By the Numbers

301	Districts receiving an overall increase in FY 2017 compared to FY 2015
101	Districts where the increased funding is less than the amount the district lost to charter schools in the 2013-2014 school year
$760 million	Minimum amount of money sent to worse performing charter schools from higher performing districts over a biennium, based on 2012-2013 school year data
$464 million	Net increase to school districts through the state's foundation funding formula in this budget

Charts and Graphs

Below are the 101 school districts receiving increases in fiscal year 2017 that are smaller than the amount they lose annually to mostly poorer performing charter schools, ranked by proposed state funding change in FY 2017 vs FY 2015.
